Reading Comprehension

This part consists of two passages, each followed by several related questions. For each question, choose the most appropriate answer based on the text.

Text I (Questions 13-17)

(1) The whale, a warm-blooded, oxygen-breathing marine mammal, has a unique respiratory system, which enables it to remain submerged for long periods of time without coming up for air. The whale's lungs basically function like those of other mammals, including humans, yet this enormous beast breathes far more efficiently.
(5) Whereas humans absorb only 15 percent of the oxygen they inhale, whales absorb as much as 90 percent. Essentially, a whale's specialized physiology gives it better "gas mileage": each breath goes a long way. Some whales' respiratory systems are so efficient that the animals can remain underwater for as long as 90 minutes between breaths.

(10) Evolution has provided the whale with one of its most interesting features: its "nose". Known as the blowhole, this orifice located on the top of its head allows the whale to take in air without surfacing completely. The whale approaches the surface of the water, flexes a muscle in order to open the blowhole, and then inhales.

Unlike most mammals, whales do not breathe automatically but must make a
(15) deliberate effort to do so. The question then arises: how can they breathe while they are asleep? Marine biologists have determined that whales have the extraordinary ability to let only half of the brain sleep at any given time. In this way, the whale is never completely unconscious and thus obtains both an adequate supply of oxygen and an adequate amount of rest.

Questions

13. An appropriate title for this text would be -

(1) How Warm-Blooded Marine Mammals Breathe
(2) The Evolution of the Whale: A Study in Marine Biology
(3) Coming Up for Air: The Whale's Lung Capacity
(4) The Extraordinary Respiratory System of the Whale

14. The main purpose of the first paragraph is to -

(1) compare the breathing patterns of whales and other marine mammals
(2) discuss the efficiency of the whale's breathing system
(3) explain why whales need to stay underwater for long periods of time
(4) present several differences between marine mammals and humans

---

15. In line 3, "those" refers to -

(1) mammals
(2) beasts
(3) humans
(4) lungs

---

16. In line 13, "inhales" can best be replaced by -

(1) moves
(2) breathes in
(3) relaxes
(4) opens up

---

17. According to the last paragraph, marine biologists have discovered that whales -

(1) are never entirely asleep
(2) need less sleep than humans
(3) never use more than half the brain
(4) often lack oxygen

Text II (Questions 18-22)

(1) Not since King Alfred the Great fought off Danish and Norwegian invaders a thousand years earlier had the English town of Malmesbury seen such excitement. Reporters arrived from as far away as Japan and two helicopters flew over the town at all hours, all in the hope of catching a glimpse of a pair of fugitives known as the (5) Tamworth Two.

In January 1998, as they were being unloaded from a truck outside the local slaughterhouse, two plucky Tamworth pigs ran for their lives. They swam across the nearby River Avon, squeezed through a fence, and hid in a garden. The five-month-old siblings, nicknamed Butch and Sundance after a pair of likeable outlaws in a popular (10) film, were on the run for over a week, most of which they spent frolicking in a dense thicket.

The pigs' owner, Arnoldo Dijulio, caused a public outcry when he stated that he still intended to send the pair to the slaughterhouse should they be captured. Outraged animal lovers offered Dijulio huge sums of money to buy the pigs' freedom. Eventually, (15) the Daily Mail newspaper bought the Tamworth Two from Dijulio in return for exclusive rights to the story. And just in time. Butch was soon caught while foraging in the thicket and Sundance was flushed out the next day.

Butch and Sundance's new owners sent them to an animal sanctuary to live out the rest of their lives. In 2003, the BBC network captured their story for posterity in an (20) hour-long television movie called The Legend of the Tamworth Two.
